RUSSIANS PLEASED

St. Petersburg, April 23.—The Ruski Slavo prints a letter from an official in the French service which reports the presence of numerous Japanese spies in France, well provided with money. They shadow Russians and watch the shipyards. Especially do they endeavor to ascertain the exact date of the Baltic fleet and the points en route at which it will coal.

The Novosti states that the Russians should feel gratified at the strategic achievement of the naval squadrons, which imposed caution upon the Japanese operations and gave Russia time to throw a preponderant military force into Manchuria. The most favorable time, the Novosti continues, for Japanese military operations has passed.

A letter written by Colonel Agapov, an officer of marines on the Petropavlovsk, who was drowned, describes the routine upon the battleship. We rise, he wrote, at 6 o'clock, learn the news of the night and drink tea. At 8 we attend colors and then read the papers.

CHAPTER VII.

"And you will not stay?"
 "I cannot, mademoiselle."
 They stood a little way from the inn porch between low box rows, and the young Frenchman's eyes look back the stenciled moonlight.
 "Yet," Anne continued, "last time we met, monsieur, I should not have deemed it too much to ask of you. There are those of your sex who would not scorn the tedium of an evening with me. Would I have spared my invitation and my blushes?"
 "Cruel! When you know I would give so much—anything—for an hour with you."

She touched his sleeve lightly. "We shall sit before the fire," she said, "and you shall tell us tales of France and of the life in your own country. 'Tis chill here."

"Mademoiselle, I cannot. I have a tryst tonight."

"With beauty? Then will I not delay so gallant a cavalier?"
 She left him and walked toward the porch, but her steps lagged. Turning, she saw him standing still, looking after her, then came back, facing her fingers together.

"You will not stay?"
 He shook his head.
 "I know why you go," she said after a moment's pause. "I heard it—I saw it."

"You saw?"
 "The quarrel in the parlor. I was in the courtyard by the window. I know what you would do."

He looked at her uncertainly, his eyes dark and bright.
 "Twas a craven thing," she went on, "a dastardly sneer at a brave, true-hearted gentleman. My Lord Fairfax is old, and the cowards, the pitiful cowards who knew him and have eaten at his table, they set and heard and titter behind their hands. But you must not fight! You must not!"

"And why not?" he asked. "An old man, a noble bated by a swine! Should not such be resented by gentlemen? And shall I, who have struck that scoundrel, refuse to meet him?"

"He has killed before!" she cried. "He has the quickest rapier in Virginia. It would be murder."

"Mademoiselle, I ask you—would you have me fear?"

"Tis no question of courage," she went on hurriedly. "Must not I, who saw it, know that? Only you of them all dared to resent it. Monsieur, you are brave."

"Mademoiselle!"
 "But it was in my lord's cause, and I ask it for his sake. If—if you fall, he would sorrow for it till his death. And—"

"And you?" He had bent forward eagerly. "Would you sorrow, mademoiselle?"

"My lord's grief would be mine."

The young Frenchman drew a deep breath. "That is all!" he said sadly. "I am nothing but a shadow—a passing stranger, whose coming or going cannot make your heart beat one bit faster or more slow? Because our ways have crossed but once, shall you tell me I cannot know your heart? We are like stars, mademoiselle, we human ones—little stars wandering in a vault of blue. When one star has found its mate, about which God has made it revolve, shall the star refuse to obey because it has never known that star before? Have I found the one woman in the world for me, and she does not see the divine in it?"

Somewhere far away a whippoorwill began to call, a liquid gurgle through the clapping dark. There came the stamping of horses and a whinny from the stables.

"Tell me, am I no more to you than that stranger passing by?"
 Anne's voice held a tremor, but she spoke earnestly and softly: "You are more than that. You are one who once guarded me from danger—one whom I have this evening seen do a gentle deed that I shall remember always."

"Ah, it was nothing," he answered. "Was it more than any gentleman might do? They were not gentlemen there. But I would be so proud of it, mademoiselle, if it made you care ever so slightly, as I have said. If it made you think of me not as a stranger, but as suddenly a little nearer, a little closer than all else besides. Do you remember what I told you that day as we rode in the wood? That a man has a want for two things—a cause to fight for and some one to wait for him? It is near the time now, and I must go, mademoiselle, out into the moonlight. I should go joyful if you but told me that last want was mine—you cannot give me that?"

Anne did not answer, but she was trembling with a new sense of intoxication.

"I ask you to give me a token, something to carry with me as I ride to keep the memory of always, to—"

"Monsieur!"

"I love you!"

"No, no!" she cried. "I cannot lie!"

"I love you!"

"Once to touch your lips!"

He was leaning near her, so near she could feel his breath warm upon her cheek. In a sudden surge of revolt she thrust out her arm as if to further the distance between them.

"No!" she cried. "No! How dare you ask me that? How dare you?"

"Ah, mademoiselle!"

"Count you me so cheap?" she asked, turning half way, but she did not hasten. He dropped on one knee and lifted the hem of her skirt to his lips.

She let her hand fall upon his head with a fluttering gesture. Then, as he started up with a joyful exclamation, she ran back toward the porch.

Standing with bared head in the moonlight, he saw her pause on the threshold—saw the heavy door close behind her.

"You clod!" bubbled a furious voice behind him.

The young man turned composedly as the figure came out of the darkness of the highroad behind him.

"Ah, my Jarrat," he said, "is it you, then?"

"Look you!" Jarrat's voice was hoarse with passion. There are some things that are denied you. This is one. Be warned!"

"Warned? And by you?" laughed the other. "You lay a law for me? Wherefore?"

"Our compact!"

"And do I not hold to it, monsieur? Did you not tell me to search out the bright eyes and red lips? Did you not say to me that love was fair in the middle plantation? Did you not whisper of proud ladies waiting to be kissed?"

Jarrat burst into a laugh.

"You! Why, you pitiful fool! So this is the way of such brave derring-do! Insults, forsooth, and duels with gentlemen! A fine nobleman it is, to be sure! Think you the toast of Virginia is to be charmed by your tinsel swash-buckling? Think you that Mistress Tillotson would lower her eyes to you?"

"She has already lowered her eyes to me, monsieur."

"I tell you I will have you keep your clerk's face elsewhere!"

"Clerk?" repeated the young man. "No, no. Not a clerk; a nobleman, a marquise—one of the high blood—a title guaranteed me this morning by my lord the Earl of Dunmore."

"So that is it," jeered the other fiercely. "You think to wed a lady by this brave masquerade. You dream!"

"Not by this masquerade—no," said the Frenchman, a brightening stain coming to his face. "By only my heart. By only what it holds, monsieur. I said she had already lowered her eyes to me. Yes, the fairest lady in Virginia, and still she does not guess of our plan and of my bargain this morning with his excellency! Ah, such happiness! I did not even dream it would be so—that she would regard me, me, just as I am. When his excellency has returned—when I am a nobleman—I shall have this to remember—that it was so. That when she first gave me her hand to kiss it was to me, just to M. Armand—not to the marquise which I shall become."

"A title," prompted Jarrat, "good only so long as I please."

"You will not tell her otherwise. No. Because you wish me to carry out this purpose—this pretty play the plan of which has so joyed the noble earl in the fort yonder and made him smile upon you and swear you were fit for a cardinal. You would not cloud this beaming favor of his with early failure. No, you will tell no one. A man serves either love or ambition, and your ambition is master. And I? I am not worthy to kiss her hand. No one on earth, rich or proud as he may be, could think himself that. But I could offer her more than you, for if I had the whole world I would give it all—wealth, name, ambition—just to be but a vagabond on the street with her! No, you will not tell her, monsieur, that I

FIBROID TUMORS CURED.

Mrs. Hayes' First Letter Appearing in Mrs. Pinkham's Book:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been under Boston doctors' treatment for a long time without any relief. They tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing-down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor given in your little book accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 253 Dudley St. (Roxbury), Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Hayes' Second Letter:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Some time ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and to-day I am a well woman."

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now. 'Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound' is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 253 Dudley St. (Roxbury), Boston, Mass. — 25000 copies of original of above letters proving genuineness cannot be produced.

am not what I may come to seem. You will not tell her."

Jarrat's face purpled.

"Beware, you spawn!" he said in a choked voice. "On other points you are free while you serve in this. But go not far along the way you have chosen—with her. She is not for such as you."

"She is for whom she loves," answered the young Frenchman.

The clatter of horses sounded, and the lank figure of Henry came from the stable yard leading two mounts.

As the pair took saddle and rode away Jarrat stood looking after them down the highroad.

"So the lady has lowered her eyes to you?" he scoffed, with a dark smile on his arrogant lips. "And I dare not spoil your gay masquerade? I wouldn't give a pistol for your chances with Foy. He will end you as he would undo an oyster. You made a mistake, my new laid marquise, in soaring so high, and a worse one in bragging of it. But for that touching scene in the yard I had stopped that blundering idiot, but now he may spit you and welcome!"

The rattle of departing hoofs had scarce died away when Anne crept softly down the stair of the inn. She had donned a long cloak, and from under the edge of its hood, drawn over her hair, her blue eyes looked out with a feverish brightness.

SOAKED YALE STUDENTS.

New Haven, Conn., April 23.—Several hundred young men, including many Yale students, have been driven from the stage door of a theatre here by a stream from the fire hose. They had gathered in answer to advertisements for supernumeraries in a production of Carmen.

A large contingent of students became suddenly possessed of a desire to lend their services to the production. The narrow alleyway leading to the stage door was soon filled and performers as well as box-holders could not enter.

To relieve the congestion, the management sent out orders to the waiting crowd that the supply of amateur material was equal to all demands, and this did not serve to decrease the throng, and the few police on duty also found their efforts of little avail. The students waited all the time with college songs, and responded to the police attempts to push them out of the alley with good-natured cheers, and remained immovable. Finally the hose was brought into action and hundreds were drenched before they could get away. They did not return, however.

Do You Suffer from lumbago, rheumatism or swollen muscles? If so, procure at once a bottle of PAIN-KILLER and follow the printed directions. The relief is instantaneous as well as lasting. ## Russian Torpedo Boats Building in Germany

New York, April 23.—Some sensation has been caused in Berlin, says a Herald dispatch from that city, by a rumor to the effect that Germany has ceded to Russia certain torpedo boats building in private yards which are on the point of completion. Eight of these, which are being built by the Schichau yard, are the largest torpedo boats as yet constructed in Germany, being of 550 tons with an average speed of 28 knots. In order to prevent a breach of neutrality it would be necessary that the German Government annul its contract with the yard, leaving the builders free to do as they please with the torpedo boats.

THAT RUSSIAN LOAN.

New York, April 22.—International banking houses in this city have received intimations that the Russian Government is on the point of making a $100,000,000 loan, if it can be found that such a loan would meet with favor among Continental bankers and those of England and the United States. Tentative and indirect inquiries have been made of London bankers and of bankers in this city to ascertain its probable reception in these two places if the loan is brought out.

A banker who is conversant with the matter said today that the Russian financial agents had found that liberal subscriptions to the loan would be received from bankers of Berlin, Vienna, Paris and Amsterdam. He added that it was exceedingly doubtful if any part of the loan could be placed in either London or New York, and that this much had been intimated to the Russian Government. It is believed, however, that the loan will be floated.

IGORROTE DOG-EATERS.

St. Louis, April 17.—Male members of the savage Igorrote tribe in the Philippine section of the World's Fair fought for favorite portions of the "luscious" stewed dog in a dinner which was served just outside the curtain today at noon. It was the most unusual feast that has ever been witnessed in St. Louis, and if the humane society wished to wage a war against the dogeater eye-witnesses at today's banquet can give important testimony in behalf of the prosecution. The enthusiasm that attends a banquet at $10 a plate was small in comparison to the manifestations of joy shown by the Igorrote. He had anticipated this feast for weeks.
